

2010 STUDY OF THE U.S. INSTITUTES

Application deadline: MONDAY, January 25, 2010

The U.S. Department of State is pleased to invite candidate nominations for the Summer 2010 Study of the United States Institutes for University Faculty and Other Related Scholars. The following six institutes will be offered:

Study of the U.S. Institute on U.S. Culture and Society will provide a multinational group of 18 foreign university faculty with a deeper understanding of U.S. society, culture, values and institutions. The Institute will examine the ethnic, racial, economic, political, and religious contexts in which various cultures have manifested themselves in U.S. society, and social movements and historical epochs throughout U.S. history. The program will draw from a diverse disciplinary base, and will itself provide a model of how a foreign university might approach the study of U.S. culture and society.

Study of the U.S. Institute American Politics and Political Thought at the University of Massachusetts Amherst will provide a multinational group of 18 foreign university faculty with a deeper understanding of U.S. political institutions and major currents in American political thought. The institute will provide the participants insight into how intellectual and political movements have influenced modern American political institutions. The institute will provide an overview of political thought during the founding period (constitutional foundations), and the development and current functioning of the American presidency, Congress and the federal judiciary. The examination of political institutions will include the electoral system, political parties and interest groups, the civil service system, media and think tanks, and the welfare/regulatory state. The institute will address modern political and cultural issues in the United States (including but not limited to civil rights, women's rights, immigration, etc.), and the significance of public discourse in the formulation of public policy.

Study of the U.S. Institute on Contemporary American Literature at the University of Louisville in Kentucky will provide a multinational group of up to 18 foreign university faculty with a deeper understanding of U.S. society and culture, past and present, through an examination of contemporary American literature. Its purpose is twofold: to explore contemporary American writers and writing in a variety of genres; and to suggest how the themes explored in those works reflect larger currents within contemporary American society and culture. The program will explore the diversity of the American literary landscape, examining how major contemporary writers, schools and movements reflect the traditions of the American literary canon. At the same time, the program will expose participants to writers who represent a departure from that tradition, and who are establishing new directions for American literature.

Study of the U.S. Institute on Foreign Policy at the University of Florida in Gainesville will provide a multinational group of 18 foreign university faculty with a deeper understanding of how U.S. foreign policy is formulated and implemented with an emphasis on the post Cold War period. This institute will begin with a review of the historical development of U.S. foreign policy and cover significant events, individuals, and philosophies that have dominated U.S. foreign policy. In addition, the institute will explain the role of key players in the field of foreign policy including the executive and legislative branches, the media, public opinion, think-tanks, non-governmental and international organizations and how these players debate, cooperate, influence policy, and are held accountable.

Study of the U.S. Institute on Journalism and Media will provide a multinational group of 18 journalism faculty and other related specialists with a deeper understanding of the role of journalism and the media in U.S. society. It will examine major topics in journalism, including the concept of a free press, First Amendment rights, and the media's relationship to the public interest. The legal and ethical questions posed by journalism will be incorporated into every aspect of the institute. The institute will cover strategies for teaching students of journalism the basics of the tradecraft: researching, reporting, writing, and editing. The program will also highlight technology's impact on journalism, addressing the influence of the internet, the globalization of the news media, the growth of satellite television and radio networks, and other advances in media that are transforming the profession.

Study of the U.S. Institute on Religious Pluralism at the University of California, Santa Barbara will provide a multinational group of up to 18 foreign university faculty and practitioners with a deeper understanding of U.S. society and culture, past and present, through an examination of religious pluralism in the United States and its intersection with American democracy. Employing a multi-disciplinary approach, drawing on fields such as history, political science, sociology, anthropology, law and others where appropriate, the program will explore both the historical and contemporary relationship between church and state in the United States. Participants will examine the following aspects of religious pluralism in the United States: the ways in which religious thought and practice have influenced, and been influenced by, the development of American-style democracy; the intersections of religion and politics in the United States in such areas as elections, public policy, and foreign policy; and the sociology and demography of religion in the United States today, including a survey of the diversity of contemporary religious beliefs and its impact on American politics.

Institute Description

The Institutes are intensive post-graduate level academic programs with integrated study tours whose purpose is to provide foreign university faculty and other scholars the opportunity to deepen their understanding of American society, culture, and institutions. The ultimate goal is to strengthen curricula and to improve the quality of teaching about the United States in academic institutions abroad. The institutes will take place at various colleges and universities throughout the United States over the course of six weeks beginning in June 2010. Specific program information will be made available on the Internet at a later date. In the meantime, prospective applicants are encouraged to visit the following website to obtain general information about the previous years' institutes: <http://exchanges.state.gov/academicexchanges/scholars.html>

Candidate's description and qualifications

Candidates should be mid-career, typically between the ages of 30-50, highly-motivated and experienced professionals from institutions of higher education who have substantial knowledge of the thematic area of the Institute.

The ideal candidate will also have little or no prior experience in the United States, whose home institution is seeking to introduce aspects of U.S. studies into its curricula, to develop new courses in the subject of the institute, to enhance and update existing courses on the United States, or to offer specialized seminars/workshops for professionals in U.S. studies areas related to the program theme.

Priority will be given to candidates who have firm plans to enhance, update or develop courses and/or educational materials with a U.S. studies focus or component, who have limited experience in the United States, and who have special interest in the program subject areas as demonstrated through past scholarship, accomplishments, and professional duties.

Other Essential Program Information

Selection: One candidate for each program will be nominated from Poland. The U.S. Department of State will select participants from the nominations it receives from around the world.

Language: English language fluency is required. Participants will be expected to handle substantial reading assignments in English and to be full active participants in all seminar and panel discussions.

Costs: The Department of State will cover all participant costs, including program administration, international and domestic travel, and ground transportation, book, cultural, mailing and incidental allowances, housing and subsistence.

Housing and Meal Arrangements: Typically, participants will have a private room with a shared bathroom during the residency portion (four weeks) of the institute, and will have to share a hotel room during the study tour (up to two weeks). Housing will typically be in college or university owned housing. Most meals will be provided at campus facilities, though participants may have access to a kitchen to cook some meals on their own. Full details will be provided once the grants have been approved.

Health Benefits: All participants will receive the Department of State's coverage of $50,000 with a $25 deductible for the duration of the program. Pre-existing conditions are not covered.

Program Requirements and Restrictions: Participants are expected to participate fully in the program. They are expected to attend all lectures and organized activities, and complete assigned readings. Family members and/or friends cannot accompany participants on any part of the program. Please note that teaching methodology and pedagogical methods will not be addressed formally in the institute. There will be little time for personal pursuits unrelated to the program. The institute should not be viewed as a research program.

Participation in Study of the U.S. Institutes and Eligibility for the Fulbright Program

Please note that, as of 2005, the Study of the U.S. Institutes (SUSI) are no longer considered Fulbright programs. As a result, SUSI participants will be eligible for future Fulbright opportunities following completion of the Institute.
